

JAPANESE COMMUNICATIONS IN INDIA ARE STRUCK TELLING BLOW AS ALLIED PLANES STRIKE; GROUND PATROLS FIRM

More Than 70 Japanese River Vessels and 12 Aircraft Destroyed in Occupied Burma — In Invaded India A Japanese Column Attempting to Reach Highway Near Tiddim is Driven Off.

By James E. Brown
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent
NEW DELHI, Apr. 3.—(INS)— Allied warplanes, lashing out while ground patrols held firm against enemy columns attempting to push deeper into India, struck Japanese communications a telling blow to-day, destroying more than 70 river vessels and 12 aircraft in sweeps over occupied Burma.

American fighters shot down four enemy planes and destroyed eight others on the ground during attacks on enemy dromes in central Burma. Lord Louis Mountbatten announced. At the same time, other fighters and dive-bombers destroyed "more than 70" river craft and damaged "a considerable number" of others in flights over the Burmese coast, the official statement added.

There was no chance on the land sectors of the Arakan front.

Within invaded India, a Japanese column attempting to reach the highway between Tiddim and Imphal was driven off although enemy artillery continued to shell the Tamu-Palel road and severe fighting raged unabated in the hilly area east of Kohima.

Earlier, Japanese jungle patrols were reported to have infiltrated to a second position on the vital Imphal-Kohima highway at a point 30 miles north of their original road block.

Other front-line dispatches reported simultaneously, however, that air-borne Allied commandos have succeeded in cutting the north-south communication lines leading to Myitkyina, the principal enemy bastion in northern Burma.

These Allied forces, which already hold a substantial section of the Myitkyina-Katha railroad, crushed a Japanese attempt to infiltrate an air strip they hold far to the rear of the enemy positions, the dispatches declared. They thus tightened their grip on one vital communications center, now of particular importance since the entire India-Burma duel of offensives appears to be taking on momentarily the aspect of a race for such hubs and for supply dumps.

Observers at the front reported that the Japanese concentrations north of Imphal and east of the Naga Hills road are increasing, while enemy commanders were said to be attempting to muster additional strength nearby despite constant Allied mortar fire.

Strangely enough nearly the whole shipment was sold before it arrived. The purchaser, who has bought other steeds from Mr. Hill, is Charles F. Mavey, who runs a dude ranch near Toronto, Canada. Hill will not sell Pirate Diamond, however, he said under any condition. This is a stud stallion which he intends to use in his hobby as a breeder of palomino and walking horses. Expect Capture of "Jap" Headquarters in Burma

New Delhi—Capture of Jap headquarters in northern Burma was virtually assured today through operations of Allied commando units which have practically isolated the Nipponese and cut off their supply.

The commando forces hold a section of the Mandalay-Myitkyina railroad for a 12 mile stretch north of Katha and also are covering the Irrawaddy river to prevent all movement of supply barges. The twin action practically isolated the Japs in northern Burma.

Germans To Shift Troops

Supreme Allied Headquarters, England—Under pressure from the German High Command which fears an Allied invasion more than Russian advances from the east, Adolf Hitler today decreed a radical change in Nazi military policy and began a major shift of German troops to western Europe.

Hitler ordered propaganda minister, Paul Joseph Goebbels to eliminate any suggestion that the invasion plans constitute a gigantic bluff. From now on, Goebbels will emphasize that invasion not only is imminent but will be on a gigantic, ruthless scale.

Reliable information available at Allied headquarters shows that German units are pouring into the lowlands and France and 50 divisions are already on hand. Reserves are staggered in deep zones behind them, while German air force squadrons now are believed to total 1,500 bombers plus fighter protection. Twenty-five German divisions are in Italy, another 25 in the Balkans and Aegean area, and five are in Denmark and 10 in Norway.

STRATEGY IN THE EAST

Now the Russians, plunging ahead at a pace which rivals the Nazi conquest of France in 1940, soon will encounter their first mountain barriers of the war. When Germany had the Russians pushed back into the Caucasus, there was fighting in the foothills of a mountain range there. Since that day Russian armies have advanced a thousand miles, virtually every foot of the distance over plains and slightly rolling country.

The Carpathians lie directly ahead of the current drive. They are not as high as the Alps, but altitudes of 7,000 to 10,000 feet provide plenty of terrain that is difficult for attackers, as the Allies have learned in Italy.

Starting near Lwow in Poland, goal of the right wing of the Soviet forces, the Carpathians make an eastward bulge into Rumania and then swing back to form the northern boundary of the Danubian watershed. Presumably the Germans will station one army in the Lwow area and another to guard the lower end of the Danube Valley. A few divisions should suffice to defend the high Carpathian bulge in the center.

Stalin's strategy henceforth will be watched with utmost interest. Will he try to send a strong army up the Danube into Hungary, capturing the Rumanian oil fields and cutting off Bulgaria? Or will he call quits in the south after the last Nazi soldier has been driven from Russian soil, turning his main attention to a drive through Poland toward Berlin?

No doubt the decision will depend largely upon the date of the opening of the second front. The Allied thrust into France will call for the strongest possible Russian drive toward Berlin rather than into the Balkans.

ENCOURAGING SIGN

Military Fascist regimes seem to be thriving in Bolivia and Paraguay on a strong-arm basis, but there is evidence that the military Fascist set-up in Argentina isn't doing so well.

Recent reports from Buenos Aires say that steady pressure is being maintained on the government of President Gen. Edelmiro Farrell and War Minister Col. Juan Peron for putting the army back in its barracks, re-establishing free elections and going back to the traditional system of constitutional government.

Strange as it may seem, the movement is reported to be headed by 15 generals, including Gen. Arturo Rawson, one of the leaders of last summer's military revolution. The generals, according to report, made their requests in a formal visit to President Farrell and the president and Colonel Peron, the real power behind the throne, took the matter under advisement.

The liberal press in Buenos Aires has been banging away for some time on the subject of a return to constitutional government. The enlistment of the 15 generals on the democratic side is decidedly an asset. It shows that the army is not wholly behind the Farrell-Peron usurpation.

ECHOES OF THE PAST

By Courier Staff Member

Review of the news as it appeared in the Bucks County Gazette issue dated at Bristol November 23, 1882. The Gazette, a weekly newspaper published in Bristol, was discontinued following its merger with the Courier.

The other evening a gang of nine youngsters, varying in age from 10 to 15 years, were arrested and taken before Esquire Bailey charged with obstructing the sidewalks, etc. The evidence showed that this crowd of boys have been in the habit of annoying the store keepers in the second ward by throwing dirt and leaves on the porches and steps, running off wheelbarrows and doing such other mischief in that line that comes into their heads. The justice gave them a severe reprimand and let them off upon payment of costs.

Dr. Adams has concluded not to leave Bristol. He has sold his house to Mr. Wilson of the firm of Wilson & Fenimore, the wall-paper manufacturers, for $5,500, and will take a lease on a portion of the large mansion of Dr. Ward, at the corner of Radcliffe and Mulberry streets.

A lodge of Junior Order of United American Mechanics was instituted in Bristol on Thursday evening last when about 30 young men met at Washington Hall. The following named officers were elected: Counselor, Robert H. Neely; vice-counselor, Harry W. Hoot; treasurer, Robert Fetter; secretary, William D. Douglass; assistant secretary, Frank P. Dohle; financial secretary, H. W. Hoot; trustees, G. W. Hoot, Frederick B. Booz, George H. Cramer.

(Following items culled from The Bucks County Gazette, issue of November 30, 1882):
Mr. Fred H. Jewett, of Rutherford, N. J., has leased the store on Mill street known as the Ark, of J. H. Vanzant, and will on the 11th of December open a news depot, and stationery store.

Fidelity Council, No. 21, of Jr. Order of U. A. M., was organized last night in Red Men's Hall. Thirty charter members were enrolled.

the ditch, smashing the frame work of the truck and shifting the load of shells. Damage to the chassis was slight, but the frame-work of the truck was damaged to the extent of approximately $800.

The shells were shaken loose by the impact, and the driver sent a message to New Jersey officers, and his employing firm dispatched another truck. The shells were re-loaded, but it was five p. m. before the load got underway to the point in New Jersey to which the naval ammunition was consigned. The cargo had been shipped from Indiana.

Neither the driver nor the relief driver were injured.
Traffic was not hampered, due to the fact the truck had come a distance off the highway before it was brought to a stop.

Pays Record Price For Palomino Colt

American Legion of Sellersville, at which Hill is Commander.
Pirate Diamond was sired by Pirate Gold and champion in the southwest, a horse which Mr. Hill refused to sell for $50,000. The dam was Lou Darling, out of Kentucky Herman, of the famous Mikaway Farm, Palmdale, Tennessee, where the Tennessee walking horses originated.

The reason Mr. Hill paid such a tremendous price for Pirate Diamond is the blood lines and the fact that the so-called "walking colt" was bred into the animal. In addition he bought 11 other horses in Texas, most of them from Mr. Hill at Colton, Texas.
Among the other animals in the shipment were Pirate Golden Bibles, out of old Kentucky Herman; Pirate Texas, also from Kentucky Herman; Pirate Star Dust, Pirate Kay Doll, a full sister to grand champion Pirate Opal Doll; Pirate Sweetie Pie, out of Pirate Herman; and Pirate Golden Princess.

These romantic names are not just glamorizing the horses, for the palominos are such beautiful animals that even the best name fails to describe them adequately. The silver-white mane and tail stands out in sharp contrast to the golden yellow of their silky body colors. The gentle blood of Arabian steeds bred by the Spanish

The bride was gowned in white, her floor-length dress having a form-fitting bodice of satin, and full skirt of tulle. The neckline was sweetheart style, and sleeves were bracelet length. The bride wore a heart-shaped headpiece of tulle, orange blossom trimmed, from which fell a tulle veil. Slip-pers were of satin. She carried a colonial bouquet of white carnations and sweet peas.

The maid of honor, Miss Mary Holmes, was attired in a light blue gown, with tulle bodice and long chiffon skirt. The sleeves were elbow length, and the gown had a sweetheart neckline. Her slippers were silver tone, and attached to a blue heart-shaped headpiece of tulle was a tulle shoulder-length veil. She carried a colonial bouquet of pink roses.

Today's Quiet Moment

(By the Rev. James R. Galley)
Pastor

Bristol Presbyterian Church

We thank Thee, O Father, that Jesus Christ Thy Son came upon the earth to give Himself for the salvation of mankind. As we live through the days of this week, which recalls to our minds the trial and death of our Lord, may we be more closely drawn to Him. Open our eyes to the fact that these sufferings were endured for us; that He suffered death for us; that He became the first fruits of them that slept for us! May we walk with Him and live with Him; may we follow Him to the Cross and the Tomb; may we be with Him as He rose from the dead, and may we give our lives to the Risen Lord, our Saviour. In His Name we pray. Amen.

Raising Persian Lambs In Bucks County Now

The war has greatly depleted the Karakul flocks in foreign countries and further destruction is inevitable. It is now a known fact that those here in America who, at the close of the war, are owners of choice pure-bred Karakul flocks are going to be in a most enviable position, and established in a business that is sound, profitable, liquid, and with the element of risk eliminated. Now is the time to look into the future and make definite plans for profitable post-war years.

If you are equipped and can finance the establishment of a choice pure-bred registered Karakul flock, at very low cost, it should be the foundation for many years of successful, profitable operation.

One hundred head of ewes and two stud rams, with any reasonable care, should produce for its owner an independent income.

The Karakul sheep in the Heron Creek Farm flock are the authentically recorded descendants of the originally imported Persian flock left by Dr. C. C. Young, the importer, at the time of his death, and consists of the choicest specimens known to the breed, all true to type, color and conformation, noted for highest fur production, and is the result of many years of the most highly approved scientific, recorded breeding methods bringing it to its present high perfection. It has for many years been considered the parent flock of America. These sheep are large, strong and vigorous, and inasmuch as dogs are not used on the range, they are tame and quiet to handle.

The natural life of purebred Karakul sheep is double that of any other breed and many are productive until 12 or 15 years of age. With proper management and care Karakul sheep can be bred to lamb twice annually. They should be cared for the same as any other sheep.

It is most desirable to select pure-bred registered animals of known blood lines with known fur producing qualities from a strong, healthy, vigorous flock which has been produced by generations of careful scientific breeding.

In selecting ewes for the foundation and establishment of high quality fur producing purebred registered Karakul flocks, several important factors should be considered, namely: quality, size, health, vigor, hardiness, vitality, uniformity, trueness of type, precocity and above all high quality fur production. Registry Certificates with extended pedigree properly transferred and signed should be demanded.

It is necessary to use purebred Karakul rams of high quality and individuality to cross with native white or western ewes for wool, skins and the production of grade flocks. The cross-bred lambs will be strong, vigorous, good rustlers and quick in maturing. The demand for cross-bred ewes and ewe lambs at good prices is almost unlimited. In cross breeding there can be no loss at lambing time as the skins from any that die can be sold at a profit.

Wonderful results in fur production have been obtained by crossing purebred Karakul rams with medium coarse woolled native white or Western ewes.

The U. S. Government Experimental station at Beltsville, Md., maintains a large flock of Karakul sheep, and has established standard gradings as to patterns and conditions of the Persian lamb furs, which range in price of from $9 to $25 per raw skin.

Lambs whose fur at birth does not show the quality warranting a satisfactory price, can be raised like other lambs for the meat industry, and will yield a top price for the skin in the fur market for the production of fur-lined parkas for Arctic wear of the U. S. Army and Air Forces.

All told this new industry offers many meritorious advantages in a farm program with relatively little extra labor involved.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS By FRANK R. KENT

dier, bogged down; that the effort to bully the legislative branch reacted with considerable Presidential political damage; that, as a result, the Roosevelt belligerency had evaporated and the message was that of a man beaten once who has no taste for a second fight.

ASIDE from the tone of the message, on its merits it must be said that, though the President argues persuasively for his point of view that the Federal ballot is the real solution, there are obvious gaps in his reasoning and, certainly, he has somewhat retreated from his previous position that the soldiers will not be able to vote at all except under the Administration plan. For example, he started out by asserting that the bill which he was permitting to become law without his signature was "wholly inadequate" but in the next paragraph he says, in effect, that its adequacy depends altogether upon the degree to which the States co-operate, which is exactly what the friends of the bill have said right along.

THE President, pointedly, did not touch upon the fact that many States already have "co-operated"; that practically all of them will have co-operated in ample time for those in the service to obtain their State ballots, vote them and return them; that under the law they are required neither to register, go to the polls or pay poll taxes; that if they are otherwise qualified to vote they can do so with less trouble than the civilian at home. And, of course, in his renewed request that Congress amend the new law so as to "authorize use of the Federal ballot to all service men and women who do not receive their State ballots by an appropriate date, whether or not they have formally applied for them" he rises completely above the Constitution, not only of the country but of a number of the States as well. In brief, he makes no attempt to meet the arguments made against his proposals but merely renews the proposals in the forms of recommendations and requests. —O— LIKEWISE, many times in the message Mr. Roosevelt stresses the "right" of the soldiers to vote, despite the fact, as pointed out by Mr. Charles Warren, distinguished constitutional authority, in his testimony before a Senate committee, that there is no inherent right to vote conferred upon the citizen in the Constitution. Voting, said Mr. Warren, is a privilege, not a right, and the Constitution merely provides that the States must lay down the conditions under which this privilege shall be exercised.

HOWEVER, the important thing is that, with the co-operation of the States and the Federal authorities, including army and navy, the men and women in the services who would be entitled to vote at home and who want to vote in the coming election will be able to do so without any real difficulty—not only for Federal offices, as advocated by the Administration, but for State offices as well. Those who are uninterested or who do not want to vote ought not to be lined up by army officers, handed a short ballot with the names on it only of the Presidential candidates and members of Congress and told to vote just as they are told to take their inoculations. That is the way the original Green-Lands bill would have worked out and its defeat was a healthful thing, indeed. The campaign to make it appear that Congress wanted to deprive soldiers of their "right" to vote and that Mr. Roosevelt was the soldiers' sole champion has fallen to the ground. The President has made no such suggestion in his message and it will be more than a little ridiculous now coming from his aides.
